Feeling Pressure on Monuments?

ACRU's Protect Monuments action plan for elected officials

Although EIB is dedicated to election issues, we want to update you on our latest project, designed to protect national monuments. Elections matter, and many officials have turned a blind eye to the destruction of our history. Our Protect Monuments initiative provides you with a petition to sign as a citizen, as well as an Action Pledge for officials to sign, noting their commitment to protecting our monuments. We encourage all citizens to download the Action Pledge and email it to your public officials asking them to sign the pledge.

Framers' Corner

Only a virtuous people are capable of freedom. As nations become more corrupt and vicious, they have more need of masters.

Benjamin Franklin, personal letter to French associates,

If you work in the office of an elected official who cares about our monuments, we encourage you to have that official sign the pledge and use it to notify constituents of his or her concern for our monuments.

Soon, we will have a list on our website of public officials who have shown themselves to be cowards or patriots.

ACRU's Blackwell: Nursing home vote fraud happens, and is preventable

ACRU Action Board Member Ken Blackwell fearlessly takes on “all the fraud we cannot see” (and the fraud we can) in senior residences. Vote suppression and manipulation in these facilities is real, and a reason why ACRU created Protect Elderly Votes. Warning of union activism, and asking residence executives for help, Ken notes that the votes of our Greatest Generation are a target for fraudsters and we must protect them.

SCOTUS demands faith from faithless electors

A signed pledge should be binding, unless you're a Democrat elector in Washington and Colorado trying to manipulate the system to block the election of Donald Trump in 2016. On July 6, in a rare unanimous decision, the Supreme Court ruled states can enforce electoral pledges ignored by rogue political activists. This is a win not just for voters, but affirms the critical need for the electoral college itself.

Note: the importance of the Electoral College to our democracy can be confusing, and the anti-electoral college National Popular Vote movement peddles a great deal of disinformation about its intent. For a precise and clear understanding of why we must defend the Electoral College, we recommend the book, “Why We Need the Electoral College” by Tara Ross. Mrs. Ross has also written “We Elect a President: The Story of Our Electoral College” to help children understand this important institution.

NEW JERSEY

The Garden State's foursome of fraud

Next time a liberal tells you there's no vote fraud (but it's only Republicans committing it), show them these fellows: Messrs. Jackson, Khalique, Mendez and Kazyen. Not just activists, but two elected officials, all Democrats (not noted in the media, so we checked.) The fraud involved thousands of mailed ballots and one of the races in question was decided by one vote after a recount.

PENNSYLVANIA

When voting by carrier pigeon no longer sounds outrageous

Would you leave your passport in a random drop box in a parking lot or on a college campus? A treasured family photo? Your latest prescription? “Of course not! It’s not safe!” is the correct answer. Incompetent liberal Pennsylvania election officials who fumbled a recent primary think drop boxes for ballots are a good idea. Republicans do not, and we wish them success with their recently filed anti-drop box lawsuit

FLORIDA AND MINNESOTA

State Court says “no” to counting votes after election day

Democrats in Florida recently moved to allow ballots to be counted after election day and make ballot harvesting legal in the state. Florida Republicans sued to block these changes, and won. Democrats are also trying this anti-vote integrity maneuver in Minnesota, and we can expect to see it in other states as they try to change the ballot fraud mantra “vote early and often” to “vote early and often and afterward.”

ALABAMA

SCOTUS says “no” to relaxing vote security laws

Alabama has long standing curbside voting rules and identification requirements for absentee ballots that safeguard the votes of its citizens. A group led by the Southern Poverty Law Center demanded these protections be overturned (Covid--the usual excuse) and an Obama appointed state judge agreed. Fortunately, the Supreme Court did not, and Alabama will be able to continue to ensure the integrity of its votes.
